Welcome to The President's Commission on Gender and Sexual Diversity wiki space.

Here you will find Meeting agendas, a LGBTQIA Resource list, Calendar of Upcoming Events and information about the Commission and it's activities on and off the campus of Millersville University. Please visit here often as information is updated.
Millersville University has established a preferred name policy and procedures that allow students and employees to indicate their preferred first names to the University community even if they have not changed their legal names.

Student Preferred First Name
- myVille Portal

- Preferred Name Policy
- FAQ’s

Our Affirmation Statement:

- Protect the civil rights of each individual, regardless of whom they love.
- Ensure equity among all people representative within the full spectrum of gender and sexual expression.
- Create an enduring culture of honor, compassion and respect for all.
Where is it dangerous to be out?

More than a third of the 196 countries recognized on this planet consider homosexuality illegal.

We all know really little for sure about how many LGBT people there are living in the world and if we apply the evidence as a percentage of 10% of the population to gay, then it’s safe to say that there are bestowed millions of LGBT people heroes and survivors taking exorcism and significant risks of their lives.

LGBT people have the same rights as any other individual to live without fear of persecution, discrimination, or violence. But why are LGBT people, in essence, less safe than anyone else?

The LGBTQ community is a global one, with members living in every country on Earth. Some countries have laws that specifically criminalize homosexuality, while others do not. In some places, the LGBT community is openly accepted and celebrated, while in others, it is viewed with fear and suspicion.

The United Nations has recognized the human rights of LGBT people and has called for an end to discrimination and violence against them. However, in many countries, the LGBT community still faces discrimination and violence, including hate crimes, harassment, and violence.

In conclusion, the LGBT community is a worldwide community, and it is important to understand the challenges and risks they face. It is crucial that we support and protect the LGBT community by advocating for their rights, education, and awareness.